Gas Regulations (Prohibited Portable Showers) Notice 2012

Pursuant to Regulation 63 of the Gas (Safety and Measurement) Regulations 2010 (“the Regulations”), I, Mark Stephen Wogan, Operations Manager, Energy Safety, give the following notice.

Notice

- 1. Short title and commencement—(1) This notice is the Gas Regulations (Prohibited Portable Showers) Notice 2012.
(2) This prohibition is to take effect on and from the day following the date of publication of this notice in the New Zealand Gazette.
- 2. Prohibited equipment—The manufacture, importation, sale (including an offer to sell), and use (including installation) of the gas fittings, being portable showers as prescribed in this notice, is prohibited.
- 3. Description—(1) The fittings to which this notice applies are portable showers which:
 - (a) comprise of a portable cubicle, or stall (similar in design to a portable toilet), usually manufactured in plastic, and having:
 - (i) a floor area of approximately 1m²; and
 - (ii) a height of approximately 2m;
 - (b) have hot water supplied to the shower fitting by a gas fired instantaneous water heater that is installed inside the shower cubicle that is either a flue-less instantaneous water heater or an open flued instantaneous water heater, and is not a room sealed type heater.
(2) For the avoidance of doubt, the fittings to which this notice applies include those portable showers matching the above description that are manufactured, sold, hired or leased by Rent A Loo NZ Limited.

- 4. Details of safety deficiency—The prohibited portable showers are, or may be, unsafe in that:
 - they do not comply with the gas installation standards cited by the Regulations (NZS 5261:2003 (Gas installation)) which prohibit the installation of instantaneous water heaters in bedrooms, bathrooms or toilets; and
 - they do not include measures to ensure that persons are not exposed to the build-up of carbon monoxide and other harmful products of the combustion of gas.

For other indoor locations, the gas installation standards specify a minimum room size based on the gas consumption of the appliance.

A small instantaneous water heater with a consumption of 25–40 MJ/hour would require a room size of around 62–100m³ while the room volume of these shower cubicles are around 2m³.

These requirements are necessary to prevent the build-up of carbon monoxide and other harmful products of combustion of gas to dangerous levels.

5. Reasons for prohibition—The portable showers described in this notice are deemed to be unsafe fittings under Regulation 11 of the Regulations in that there are not measures in place to ensure that persons are not exposed to carbon monoxide and other harmful products of combustion of gas.

Dated at Wellington this 6th day of November 2012.

New Zealand Qualifications Authority

Education Act 1989

Education (Exempt Training Schemes) Notice 2012

The following notice is given by the New Zealand Qualifications Authority under section 232B(1)(b) of the Education Act 1989.

Notice

1. Title—This notice is the Education (Exempt Training Schemes) Notice 2012.

2. Commencement—This notice comes into force on Thursday, 8 November 2012.

3. Interpretation—In this notice:

“corporate training” means study or training arranged for personnel of one or more organisations, where the study or training is paid for by the organisations, and it is not open for participation by the general public.

“credit value” means the measurement of time spent on study or training, where each credit represents ten notional learning hours.

“recreational in nature” means the training scheme is for the pursuit of recreation, pleasure or leisure (including in the nature of a hobby), and the skills gained are not designed to lead to further or higher study, or entry into employment.

4. Exempt training schemes—The following classes of training schemes, which are of less than three months duration, are exempt for the purposes of section 232B(1)(b) of the Education Act 1989:

- (a) Training schemes that are recreational in nature;
- (b) corporate training, but not including corporate training schemes that are designed for the purpose of meeting regulatory requirements for occupational registration, occupational licensing, or health and safety in the workplace; and
- (c) training schemes of less than a credit value of ten credits, but not including training schemes that are designed for the purpose of meeting regulatory requirements for occupational registration, occupational licensing, or health and safety in the workplace.

5. Revocation—The section entitled “Exemption criteria for the exemption of courses of less than three months”, contained in the notice in the New Zealand Gazette, 10 July 2003, No. 78, page 2075, entitled “Criteria for the Exemption of Courses of Less Than Three Months Delivered to Foreign Students and Associated Withdrawal and Refund Criteria”, is revoked.

Dated at Wellington this 8th day of November 2012.

KAREN POUTASI (DR), Chief Executive, acting under delegated authority from the Board of the New Zealand Qualifications Authority.

Explanatory Note

This note is not part of the notice, but is intended to indicate its general effect.

This notice, which comes into force on Thursday, 8 November 2012, sets out the training schemes of under three months for which certain tertiary education institutions do not require NZQA approval under section 251 of the Education Act 1989 (“the Act”). Those tertiary institutions are universities, polytechnics, wānanga, and registered private training establishments.

A training scheme is study or training that leads to an award, such as a certificate or document granted in recognition of a student’s achievement and completion of study or training, but does not of itself lead to a qualification on the New Zealand Qualifications Framework.

By being exempt from approval, those tertiary education institutions may enrol international students in the exempt training schemes without committing an offence under section 292F of the Act.

The exempt training schemes are those for recreational activities (eg, leisure or hobby activities like rope climbing or origami), corporate training provided exclusively for personnel of employers, and those of less than ten credits (ie, being less than 100 notional learning hours). However, where a training scheme of less than ten credits is for the purpose of a regulatory requirement for occupational registration, occupational licensing, or health and safety in the workplace, it is not exempt. An example of training for a regulatory requirement is first aid training.

It is important to note that although a training scheme may be exempt from approval under section 251 of the Act, a tertiary education institution is not prevented from applying for approval of the training scheme under section 251. For example, a registered private training establishment may wish to obtain approval because the organisations to which it is providing corporate training require the training to be externally quality assured, or the registered private training establishment may wish to obtain the training scheme approval in order to avoid lapse of its registration under section 234(1) of the Act.
