The Amendment amends the input methodologies for reconsideration of default price-quality paths set out in Subpart 5 of Part 4 of the EDB IM determination the GDB IM Determination, and the GTB IM Determination.

The Amendment also amends the input methodologies contained in the Airport IM Determination for:

- i. the initial valuation date for land; and

2014-au7317

Notification of Amendments to Input Methodologies Applicable to Electricity Distribution Businesses

Pursuant to section 52W of the Commerce Act 1986 (the “Act”), the Commerce Commission (“Commission”) gives the following notice.

The Commission has amended the input methodologies applicable to electricity distribution businesses contained in the Electricity Distribution Services Input Methodologies Determination 2012 [2012] NZCC 26.

The amendments are set out in the Electricity Distribution Input Methodology Amendments Determination 2014 [2014] NZCC 31 (“Amendment”).

The Amendment comes into effect on the date of this notice.

The Amendment amends the input methodologies that apply to default and customised price-quality paths for electricity distribution businesses from 1 April 2015.

The Amendment relates to corrections to terms the Commission uses to set starting prices based on the current and project profitability of each electricity distribution business (“first type amendments”) and changes that affect other aspects of the default price-quality path (“second type amendments”).

The first type amendments:

- i. reflect a mid-year cash-flow timing assumption in the relevant definitions of notional deductible interest for the treatment of taxation;
- ii. correct for the double deduction of the term credit spread differential allowance when calculating the regulatory tax allowance; and
- iii. correct the definition of amortisation of initial differences in asset values to take account of the changes in initial difference values that result from the age, sale and acquisition of relevant assets.

The second type amendments are primarily focused on pass-through and recoverable costs, and their treatment under the weighted average price cap. The Amendment limits the risk of under- and over-recovery of pass-through and recoverable costs.

In addition, the second type amendments make a number of changes in relation to recoverable costs, including to:

- i. give effect to the quality incentive scheme the Commission will implement under section 53M(2) of the Act;
- ii. give effect to incentives for each electricity distribution business to undertake energy efficiency and demand side management initiatives;
- iii. provide a “wash-up” for forecast capital expenditure in the years prior to the setting of a default price-quality path determination;
- iv. provide a “wash-up” for additional expenditure related to transmission asset purchases in a regulatory period for transmission asset purchases that were forecast to be completed prior to a price reset, but which were not concluded;
- v. provide for the recovery of prudent expenditure incurred because of a catastrophic event following reconsideration of a default price-quality path;
- vi. allow for the recovery of amounts relating to other reconsideration events, following a reconsideration of a default price-quality path or customised price-quality path, other than from a catastrophic event;
- vii. allow for recovery of levies or other charges or costs associated with the extended reserves regime administered by the Electricity Authority;
- viii. update the recoverable cost term for avoided transmission costs for distributed generation; and
- ix. allow for the one-off recovery of additional revenue for three electricity distribution business arising from the 2012 reset of the default price-quality path applicable to electricity distribution businesses.

The reason for the changes to the specification of price input methodologies introduced by the second type amendments is to limit the risk of under- or over-recovery of pass-through and recoverable costs.

The second type amendments also introduce several new recoverable costs that provide a number of incremental improvements.

The new recoverable costs:

- i. include new incentive schemes intended to provide incentives for suppliers to maintain or improve their quality of supply, and to improve energy efficiency and demand-side management, including improving incentives to invest in new assets with an energy efficiency and demand-side management purpose;
- ii. allow the Commission to provide an adequate response to a reconsideration event (such as a catastrophic event) for electricity distribution businesses and consumers; and
- iii. allow the Commission to take into account developments being undertaken by the Electricity Authority that may impact certain recoverable costs.

Copies of the Amendment and reasons paper are available on the Commission's website at www.comcom.govt.nz/regulated-industries/input-methodologies-2/amendments-and-clarifications/

2014-au7318

Notification of Amendments to Input Methodologies Applicable to Electricity Distribution Businesses and Transpower—Incremental Rolling Incentive Scheme (IRIS)

Pursuant to section 52W of the Commerce Act 1986 (the "Act"), the Commerce Commission ("Commission") gives the following notice.

The Commission has amended the input methodologies applicable to electricity distribution services and Transpower under Part 4 of the Act.

The input methodologies amended are set out in the following determinations:

- Electricity Distribution Services Input Methodologies Determination 2012, [2012] NZCC 26
- Transpower Input Methodologies Determination [2012] NZCC 17

The input methodologies which are amended are contained in the Incremental Rolling Incentive Scheme Input Methodology Amendments Determination 2014 [2014] NZCC 32 ("Amendment").

The Amendment comes into effect on the date of this notice.

The Amendment introduces a new form of Incremental Rolling Incentive Scheme (IRIS) to apply to future individual and default price-quality path determinations. The IRIS provides a mechanism by which suppliers that are subject to price-quality regulation can retain the benefits of efficiency gains beyond the end of a regulatory period.

The IRIS applicable to non-exempt electricity distribution businesses:

- i. affects incentives for default price-quality paths;
- ii. can be described as "symmetric";
- iii. provides incentives that are the same in each year of the regulatory period; and
- iv. affects incentives to control operating and capital expenditure during a regulatory control period.

The IRIS applicable to Transpower:

- i. can be described as "symmetric";
- ii. provides incentives that are the same in each year of the regulatory period; and
- iii. affects incentives to control operating expenditure during a regulatory control period.

The Commission has amended these input methodologies to improve the incentives for electricity distribution businesses and Transpower to control expenditure and to improve efficiency, and share improvements in efficiency with consumers through prices that are lower than they otherwise would have been.

Copies of the Amendment and reasons paper are available on the Commission's website at www.comcom.govt.nz/regulated-industries/input-methodologies-2/amendments-and-clarifications/

and are available for inspection free of charge at the Commission (during ordinary office hours), or for purchase at a reasonable price at the Commission, 44 The Terrace, Wellington.

2014-au7319

Notification of Amendment to Input Methodologies for Transpower to Introduce a Listed Project Mechanism

The Commerce Commission ("Commission") has amended the input methodologies applicable to electricity lines services supplied by Transpower New Zealand Limited ("Transpower") under Part 4 of the Commerce Act 1986.

The amended input methodologies are:

- Transpower Input Methodologies Determination [2012] NZCC 17; and
- Transpower Capital Expenditure Input Methodology Determination [2012] NZCC 2

The amendment is set out in the Transpower Input Methodologies Amendment Determination 2014 (No. 2) [2014] NZCC 34.

The Commission has created a "listed project" mechanism which allows Transpower to apply, within a regulatory period, for approval of additional capital expenditure ("capex") relating to pre-identified large (ie forecast to cost more than $20 million) asset refurbishment or asset replacement projects. These projects should have at least one (or more) assets likely to be commissioned in the regulatory period, and must be projects for which a commencement date within the regulatory period is anticipated but cannot be forecast with specificity.

Reasons

The Commission has made this amendment so that, for listed large asset replacement and asset refurbishment projects, Transpower has increased timing flexibility to apply (within a regulatory period) for additional capex associated with those projects.

Transpower has previously indicated its view that large projects with high cost or timing uncertainty (such as large reconductoring projects) are a poor fit with the base capex framework. In the absence of a listed project mechanism, these projects would fall within the broader base capex portfolio, for which the Commission must set a base capex allowance in advance of each regulatory period. The processes contained within the Transpower Capital Expenditure Input Methodology Determination require Transpower to submit a base capex proposal 16 months prior to a regulatory period.

The listed project mechanism allows listed large asset replacement and asset refurbishment projects that are subject to uncertain timing to be separated from the base capex proposal and submitted for approval of additional capex within a regulatory period. Additional time allows Transpower to undertake more investigation, planning, and detailed design work so that a listed project commencement date can be predicted with more certainty, and more accurate cost estimation for that project is likely.

In the Commission's view, once capex relating to a listed project is approved, further timing or cost estimation uncertainty can be accommodated within the base capex framework, noting the fungible nature of the base capex portfolio permits substitution by Transpower between projects and programmes.

Summary

The mechanism requires listed projects to meet certain requirements before the Commission can, at its discretion and before the start of a regulatory period, identify them as such in an individual price-quality path determination. Once listed, Transpower can apply to the Commission for approval of additional capex relating to a listed project.

When seeking approval of additional capex relating to a listed project, Transpower must meet certain requirements. These include specific information requirements, and a requirement for Transpower to consult (prior to seeking approval) with interested persons in accordance with Transpower's own policies and processes, and at a scope commensurate with the project's nature, complexity, impact and significance.

The processes for evaluating an application for approval of additional capex relating to a listed project are commensurate with those that would apply if the listed project was an identified programme submitted as part of Transpower's base capex proposal prior to the regulatory period.

The criteria the Commission will use to evaluate an application for approval of additional capex relating to a listed project are the same as those which would apply if the listed project was an identified programme submitted as part of Transpower's base capex proposal prior to the regulatory period.

The Commission will make and publish its decision on any application by Transpower for approval of additional capex relating to a listed project as soon as reasonably practicable.

The Commission will then take account of the revenue impact of any capex approved by the Commission for a listed project within a regulatory period when it reconsiders Transpower's individual price-quality path, in each year (save the last), of that regulatory period.

Additional capex relating to a listed project that is approved by the Commission will be able to be substituted by Transpower between base capex projects within the overall envelope of approved base capex for the regulatory period, and subject to the base capex incentive framework in the Transpower Capital Expenditure Input Methodology Determination.
